

8-Year Old Pulls For Success Of Shriners' Project

Dec 2, 2000

By Ralph Hall

Alyssa Braley of New Bedford, Massachusetts has taken it upon herself to help children in Shriners Hospitals. The active 8-year-old has taken on a useful hobby - collecting soda can pull tabs. For a while, her mother did not know what to do with Alyssa's collection.

Hearing about the Shriner's and their projects, Alyssa decided it fit in with her plans to help children her own age who are not as fortunate as she is.

After school one day, Alyssa met with Ralph Hall of The Shrine Club of Southeastern Massachusetts and turned over the results of her collecting - 10 pounds of tabs.

Alyssa now plans to go back to school and recruit her classmates into saving tabs and Campbell Soup labels. With young people helping Shriners with their projects, they will be helping young people in Shiner's Hospitals get well and on their way to bright and healthy futures.
